

Since I primarily listen to (and pay for) XM Radio, I rely on their weather and traffic channels to quickly check conditions for the cities I am in. Fortunately, that service is supposed to be available in Atlanta by year's end. Then, instead of waiting for the local stations to get around to them, I can get them when I need it. This is an invaluable service that is not duplicated anywhere else on the air.